Prices and Quality That Win New Trade

The key that unlocks the treasure chest of confidence is fashioned by the hand of faithfulness—the hand that never swerves from a fixed purpose to render full value received.

Without the confidence of our public we could not reasonably expect the bigger and better business that this furniture store looks forward to. By "full value received" we mean as well as reliable quality, newness of design and fair prices. The values we quote below stand out boldly and well illustrate the business policy here.

SAYS COUNCIL.

to issue notices to the abutters that the extension was to be made. A resolution for department appropriations was read a second time and adopted, $9,500 being appropriated to the water account, $50 to births and deaths and $300 to assessing taxes. On motion of Alderman Rossi, a license to run a pool table at 335 North Main street, was granted to John Russo.

A communication was received from the Barre Railroad company, which was in the form of a resolution which they wished the council to adopt directing the city treasurer to call upon the railroad company for $10,000, to be credited to the railroad's account for the changing of the river bed. This resolution was to rescind the resolution passed by the council two weeks ago, which was to the same effect as this proposed resolution. The city clerk said that he could see no reason for changing the resolution which the council had already adopted and had collected money from the city and the abutters on it, and that the resolution from the railroad was to all intents and purposes the same as the previous one. The clerk was instructed to notify the railroad that the council could see no good reason for making any change in the resolution.

The fire committee recommended the installing of a hydrant on Branch street and it was ordered installed. Alderman Hoyt registered a protest against the public drinking fountain in the park, claiming that it was unsanitary and that it should be done away with altogether or a more modern fountain installed. The matter was referred to the health committee to investigate and recommend some change.

WEST POINT UNIFORMS.

Cadets Must Sacrifice Comfort For the Sake of Looks.

"It is true," said a retired army officer in a discussion of West Pointers with the Washington Herald, "that many West Pointers acquire a figure of perfection of symmetry and a carriage the acme of manly grace, but these are due not to any ingenious appliances, but to the systematic drills and exercises that make the cadet, to a certain extent, an athlete. At the outset these young fellows are put through what are called the 'setting up' exercises, their object being to straighten the body and develop the chest. One might suppose that it would require a great amount of such exercise to make any marked showing, but three long hours of such exercise daily will soon produce beneficial results in the most stooped forms.

"The cadet uniform is also a great help in this direction. The dress coat is light, very tight. The shoulders are heavily padded in order to give them a square effect. The chest is made thick, so that there will be no danger of wrinkling. And in size a new dress coat seems always to be designed for a boy several times smaller than the one who is to wear it. A new dress coat, in fact, is always a source of suffering to its owner. When he first puts it on it buttons readily about the neck, but seems to lack about six inches at the waist. The owner may squirm and wriggle and attempt to reduce his waist to a minimum circumference, but his maiden efforts are never sufficient to button the new dress coat. Experience is a great teacher, though, and the young fellow laughingly requests one or two of his friends to lend their assistance, and he finally succeeds in buttoning the coat. All this for the sake of looks. Comfort has no place in the makeup of a West Pointer; it's discipline and looks."

Just after quitting time the other day, a Pole employed in the Palace marble mill in West Rutland was injured in a peculiar manner. He stooped over to clean his boots with a hose and when he straightened up his head came in contact with a moving marble gang and he was hurled several feet. He was badly injured, but will recover.
